Stormbreak supports children's mental health through working with trusted adults and children to embed mentally healthy movement every day for every child.

At stormbreak, we work together to provide preventative, accessible programmes and services that support organisations, communities, trusted adults and the children in their care to embed mentally healthy movement every day, for every child and in doing so improve children's lives.

And we need help.

Summary of Together Programme Manager Position:

To be part of the stormbreak operational team managing and delivering stormbreak's Together programmes working with foster parents, looked after children/children in care, adoptive parents, social workers and the wider social care sector.

Stormbreak's vision is to embed mentally healthy movement programmes and services that reach and help every child requiring support at a preventative level through education, health and social sectors. Stormbreak supports trusted adults that live with, work with, care for and support children to recognise, respond and regulate their mental health through movement.

The Project: Background and Context.

There is a growing need to support the mental, emotional and physical wellbeing of children in order to reduce the potential onset of long term mental ill health, mitigate escalation and prevent crisis point. Recent years have seen an unprecedented surge in demand for mental health care in children across the UK.

- Between April and September 2021, there was an 81% increase in referrals for children and young people's mental health services compared with the same period in 2019. The increase for adults (19 years and over) in the same period was 11%. (BMJ 2022).
- During the same period, there were over 15 000 urgent or emergency crisis care referrals for children and young people, a 59% increase compared with the same period in 2019.
- One in five children and young people waited more than 12 weeks for a follow-up appointment with mental health services between April 2020 and March 2021. (BMJ, Feb 2022).
- The problem has escalated since the pandemic with 432,000 referrals for people aged 18 and under to children and young people's mental health services in the six months up to February this year – more than doubling the number of referrals compared to the same period in 2019/20. (Nuffield Trust 2023).
- Looked after children are highly vulnerable to emotional and relationship difficulties, putting them at risk of long-term mental health issues and placement breakdown with their carers.
- Many foster parents struggle to cope with the emotional and mental health challenges of the children they look after. If they cannot access support or do not develop the necessary skills and emotional capacity, this can lead to placements breaking down and more resulting mental health challenges for the foster children who can then feel even more unloved, uncared for and abandoned.

- The rate of mental health disorders in the general population aged 5 to 15 is 10%. However, for those who are looked after, it is 45%, and 72% for those in residential care. In addition, frequent placement moves can keep looked-after children and young people from receiving the support they need by disrupting treatment plans and access to services. Frequent placement moves are linked to poorer mental health and a lessened sense of belonging. (NICE guideline [NG205] Oct 2021).

Stormbreak has developed and delivered (face to face and digital) programmes for foster and adoption families guiding them to use mentally healthy movement to support the emotional health and wellbeing of their foster and birth children.

Alongside the Together programme designed specifically for foster parents, the stormbreak 'Shine' digital intervention will support parents with additional resources for particular emerging needs such as attachment issues, anxiety and challenges around focus and attention.
